Tom Miron Dean of Students

Often when meeting with students I hear statements made along the lines of, "That is (or is not) what St. Francis is all about." Likewise, when St. Francis graduates from different eras meet, they seem to share an understanding about the commonality of their high school experience that transcends the time differences.

No mission statement, no hastily scrawled letter from the Dean, can adequately articulate just what it means to be a part of the St. Francis community. Rather, it is like an unexplainable family tradition that has evolved over time, and is passed through the generations by example and everyday living. Here at St. Francis each class is part of this process, first by absorbing from their elders and later by bequeathing to those who follow behind. Each class is thus responsible for nurturing this legacy "of what St. Francis is all about."

At this time I would like to thank the Class of '96 for a job well done . They have stepped up and met the challenge of keeping our greatest tradition (perhaps fittingly unexplainable) alive. To the other classes who follow, be prepared, you too will have your day.
